

HOTEL THIEVES
GET BIG HAULS

Three Rooms Entered; The Police Believe Organized Band Did the Work.

An organized band of hotel thieves is believed to have committed the burglary of the rooms of W. G. Salmon, and D. C. Imboden, in the Leon hotel, and that of L. E. Fish, in the Glenn hotel, early Sunday morning, many articles of value being taken while the inmates of the rooms were asleep.

Due to the short distance between the two hotels, officers are inclined to believe that the robberies were committed by the same gang. The rooms of Imboden and Salmon are on the opposite side of the hall on the third floor of the Leon hotel, and were entered about the same time, a belt buckle taken from the latter's room being found on a trunk in Imboden's room. Salmon lost a watch valued at $50, and about $20 in cash, while $20 in cash, mining certificates valued at $20,000, an overcoat, a watch, and other valuable papers were stolen from Imboden's room. Clothing owned by both Salmon and Imboden was found scattered in the hallway Sunday morning, the pockets having been rifled.

L. E. Fish, of the Glenn hotel, who is a visitor in El Paso from Prescott, Ariz., lost a watch, one $10 bill, and about $2 in small change. Entrance into the room was made through the door leading into the hallway.

ROBBER HOLDS CLERKS
AT BAY; GETS OVER $100
Armed with a pistol, with which he held two clerks at bay, a masked robber, Saturday night at 8 o'clock, took over $100 from the cash drawer of the Sunset grocery, 700 Mundy avenue. The bandit entered through a rear door of the grocery, and after telling the two clerks to hold up their hands, walked to the cash register, taking out the money with one hand, and covering the employees with a pistol in the other.

He made his exit through the front door of the store, the robbery not occupying three minutes.

Mounted officers were dispatched to the scene of the robbery from the police station, but were unable to find any trace of the thief in a thorough search of the vicinity.

RICH GERMANS PAY FANCY PRICES FOR RARE PAINTINGS
Berlin, Germany, Nov. 19.—Rich Germans still have money for other purposes than buying war bonds, as is evident from an auction sale of oil paintings just held here. A collection of 144 pictures, which belonged to the late privy councillor Hugo Schmeltz of Bremen, brought a total of $283,000. The highest price, $11,570, was paid for an early work of Max Liebermann in the style of Rembrandt, representing a girl making preserves. A small portrait by Liebi brought $10,000, and two other portraits by him each $4,400, but a Leinbach portrait of Bismarck (in civilian clothing) went at the surprisingly low price of $2,300. A peasant scene by van Goyen, a small canvas, was knocked down at $5,500, which shows that the great Italian master has lost nothing of his popularity in Germany through the war. Three pictures by the Frenchman Courbet brought together $11,800.

The Great Linen Event--

—which opened today, brought out great throngs of enthusiastic buyers, and we have no doubt but what all records were broken for one day's Linen selling.

It is extraordinary that we should have any Linens at all. But more extraordinary to have so many at such low prices.

In the history of linens there has never been a situation like that now confronting manufacturers, dealers and consumers. Linens have doubled and trebled in price, and even at these high prices they are not obtainable in satisfactory quantities. Under the circumstances we think ourselves extremely fortunate to be able to offer during this Thanksgiving Event The Finest Grades Of Table and Art Linens in Unlimited Quantities and at Hardly Any Advances Over the Prices of a Year Ago.

We hope that every woman wanting linens, whether for the Thanksgiving table, for year-round use, or for Christmas gift presentation, will make herself realize that this offer is both timely and unusual. It will not be made again as we cannot obtain future supplies in quantities or at prices anywhere like what we now offer. Make the most of this opportunity then by coming this week and buying freely.

Abandoned Babe is Found In Large Box In Apartment House

Abandoned by its mother when but a few hours old, an American baby, wrapped in an old sheet and blanket, was found by Pablo Vescas, a laborer, in a large dry goods box on the second floor of an apartment house at Eighth and Santa Fe streets early Sunday morning. Breathing and apparently in the best of health, the infant was taken in charge by Mexican families, pending the arrival of sergeant Van Thompson and patrolman J. A. Wilson from the police station to investigate the case. It was later taken to the rescue home of the Salvation army.

Detectives are investigating the identity of a laundry mark found on an article of clothing which was found about the child.

But for the cries which attracted Vescas, it is thought that the baby would have undoubtedly frozen in the box, as it is believed it was placed there to die. Families residing in the apartment house stated that they knew nothing of the incident until informed by Vescas, who later notified the officers.

Girl Married a Whole Week, but Didn't Know Name of Her "Esposo"

"What's in a name?" police Capt. William Simpson asked himself Sunday morning, when a comely looking young Mexican woman called at the police station to find out if her "esposo" was being held in the city jail. She did not know his last name. "I do not know my husband's name, señor except that it is Francisco," replied the young woman to the questioning of the jail captain.

"How long have you been married," asked the captain.

"One semana (one week), señor," replied the bride.

"Well then you do not even know your own name, although you have been married a week," the captain said.

"No, señor," replied the woman.

"Well, I will call out the names of those in jail, and if we come to you can tell me," said the captain, picking up the night jailer's report.

A long list of Franciscos was read by the captain, before he came upon the right one, the woman declaring that the last one called was her "esposo."

"He can get out for a $5 bond," said the captain.

The bridegroom remained in jail.

STOLEN DRESSES AND JEWELS RECOVERED BY DETECTIVES

Five silk dresses and several pieces of jewelry, which were taken Sunday afternoon from the home of Herman Andrews, cashier of the City National bank, were recovered by city detectives Sunday night.

The home of Mr. Andrews was entered during the absence of the family, about two o'clock. One arrest was made by city detectives following the robbery and the recovery of the goods, but Mr. Andrews refused to prosecute the alleged thief.
